End General Clean-Up Sale

—We announce a vigorous underselling movement that brings into bargain-action every section of this store. The object of this sale is two-fold—to clean our stocks of all Remnants, Odd Lots, Broken Assortments and Discontinued Styles, to make room for newer goods, rather than wait for the so-called Quarterly or Semi-Annual Inventory or Clearance Sales announced now and then. The remarkably low prices tell of wonderful savings.

The Mercantile Heart of New England

Is a Term Long Ago Bestowed Upon This House and Even More Demonstrable Today Than Ever Before

- There are many reasons why this establishment holds the position it does to-day—that of first place in the retail field of New England.
- UNEQUALLED BUYING RELATIONS AND stock at home form a prominent factor—for thus are larger, better selected and more exclusive assortments made possible.
- The policy of FAIREST TREATMENT has also played a prominent part—the foundation stone of this business, 61 years ago, being Honest, Straightforward dealings with its patrons.
- But in addition to these there has ever been—and is at present stronger than ever—a determination to render such SERVICE that shopping here shall be easy and pleasurable—that every provision that makes for the convenience of our patrons shall be anticipated and provided for promptly.
- Through these advantages and principles a great business has been created—one of the few truly great stores of the world—all due to the recognition of the New England public of the facilities for satisfactory shopping which obtain here and which no other store can truthfully claim.

- Two Entire Buildings are required for this great Business—one devoted to Housefurnishings and Fancy Goods, the other to Wearing Apparel and Dry Goods
- In Both Buildings kindred lines of merchandise are conveniently grouped together to facilitate convenience in shopping
- The Floor Area of these Two Buildings totals over 21 acres—a space much greater than that of any other store

But, after all, an establishment of the size and character of "The Mercantile Heart of New England" is not merely a shopping place—it is an institution which means much to the community and one which shall have constantly the highest effort of all its executives and co-workers to maintain and strengthen its usefulness to its great family of patrons.

By RICHARD BARRY.

NEW YORK, April 22.—With the body of Colonel John Jacob Astor, Jr., lying in state today, with Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, his widow, at his side, the nation is reminded of the fact that the Astor family is one of the great families of the world. The Astor family is one of the great families of the world. The Astor family is one of the great families of the world.

Use of the great families of the world. The Astor family is one of the great families of the world. The Astor family is one of the great families of the world. The Astor family is one of the great families of the world.

Eighty Per Cent to Vincent. The outstanding fact is that, "Eighty per cent of the Astor estate is left as it was left to John Jacob Astor, Jr. by his father, William Astor, and given to Vincent Astor."

With the terms of this bequest, John Jacob Astor, Jr., has left a fortune of $60,000,000 to his son, Vincent Astor. The fortune is to be paid to Vincent Astor in installments of $10,000,000 per year for the next 20 years.

When William Astor died the estate amounted to approximately $300,000,000. At the present time it is estimated to be worth $1,000,000,000. The fortune is to be paid to Vincent Astor in installments of $10,000,000 per year for the next 20 years.

Of this seventy-five or eighty millions, all but a few millions are to be paid to Vincent Astor in installments of $10,000,000 per year for the next 20 years. The fortune is to be paid to Vincent Astor in installments of $10,000,000 per year for the next 20 years.

Which of These Two, SKETCHED FROM LIFE, Would You Make President?

You know which of the two Lincoln would select. He would hardly pick out for the White House "The Professor" in the fancy silk stockings and patent leather pumps with satin bows. The feet as well as the head of the professor were sketched from life. Those feet would look funny in the boots of Lincoln. And the Professor's head would look funnier still in the hat of Lincoln.

Professor Wilson has come to Massachusetts and had his say to the voters. He apparently took it for granted that they knew all about HIM and that their happiness, to be complete, required only an opportunity to SEE him.

Professor Wilson will find tomorrow, after the votes are counted at the Presidential primary, that it might have been better for his chances if Massachusetts HAD NOT SEEN HIM.

Two unpleasant extremes meet in Professor Wilson. We show you the extremes on this page.

The picture of Professor Wilson and that of Champ Clark were sketched from life when the two men met on the same platform at Carnegie Hall, New York.

Please notice "the extremes that meet" in Professor Wilson—namely, the head and the feet.

The head is the head of a smug, self-satisfied pedagogue, convinced of his own superiority and thoroughly convinced of the inferiority of all those that have not led his life and shared his ideas.

It is true that since he began running for President he has discarded the complete set of pedagogical notions that he used to impress on his students and that he is now laboriously trying to swallow and regurgitate the ideas that he thinks will suit "men of the baser and meaner sort," as he puts it, whose votes he wants just now.

One extreme of Professor Wilson is a cynical, self-satisfied, holier-than-thou face.

And the other extreme, which will interest the average citizen of Massachusetts, is the professor's cunning little pair of feet.

Those feet were sketched from life.

They were worth sketching and the picture was made by a man who sat literally at the professor's feet just below the platform.

You can study part of the professor's character in his face, as he sneers and argues with all the self-confidence and practice of the pedagogue.

And you can also study the professor's character in those cunning little feet, with their brilliant patent leather "pumps" shining like diamonds and their fancy, beautiful, smooth silk socks, and the little, pretty satin bow on each of the professor's highly arched and very handsome insteps.

It would be difficult indeed to imagine the professor's head in Lincoln's hat, or the professor's feet in Lincoln's boots. It would be difficult to imagine any sane citizen of Massachusetts voting to make a Presidential candidate of Wilson after seeing him in his full New York professorial evening regalia standing up beside Champ Clark.

From the point of view of the fashion plate Champ Clark, as you can clearly see in this picture, is a sad failure compared with Professor Wilson.

Champ Clark is sadly deficient as a Beau Brummel. His shirt is nearly always mussed up in front, he has not got a pair of pointed patent leather, satin bow dancing pumps in the whole world.

Yet, feebly as Mr. Clark compares with the professor in the matter of pumps and silk socks, when you look at the faces of the two men and study the characters of the two men you are amazed at the stupid audacity of the dandified professor in presenting himself before you as a candidate for the greatest office, the office that has been filled by men that have worked as Champ Clark looks and works.

If you want a neat and pretty, self-satisfied, sneering professor, who looks down upon your ignorance, who considers that the small business man is an American ignoramus, and the working man from Europe a "base and mean" creature, below the Chinese, if you want a Federalist, a man of monarchical tendencies, out of sympathy with the people and distrusting the people, if you want in the White House a professor who thinks that Providence has called him TO RULE AND INSTRUCT YOU, then you want Professor Wilson, who neglects the work that the people pay him for in New Jersey, who has neglected his task as Governor ever since he entered upon it, and who spends his time trying to make you think that he is the kind of man you want in the White House.

The names of Champ Clark and of Professor Wilson will appear upon your ballot tomorrow, and these names will be presented to you as DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES for the Presidency.

But of the two, only one is a Democrat. THAT ONE IS CHAMP CLARK; and the other, Professor Wilson, no more a Democrat than was Alexander Hamilton.

Professor Wilson is the man who, as W. R. Hearst pointed out in his interview in the Washington Post, anxiously asks the question, "What shall we do to return to Hamilton?"—that is to say, to return to the system of government that considers the people children in need of some wise professor to lead and protect them.

For the statesman really democratic, who have given this country the good things it possesses intellectually, and for the hard workers whose honest labor has given to the country its material possessions, Professor Wilson of the patent leather pumps and the silk sock has only mistrust and contempt.

And this we shall prove to you by the professor's own words, quoted in the interview by W. R. Hearst already referred to.

This (referring to Professor Wilson's admiration of Alexander Hamilton) was all written when Professor Wilson was not a candidate for the Presidency and when he was freely and honestly expressing his actual federalistic opinions.

It was under similar conditions conducive to genuine expression of actual sentiment that Professor Wilson reflected upon Washington and said: "It is for any one who likes the sinister suggestion to say that Washington's ardor for the occupancy of the Western country was that of the land speculator, not that of the statesman."

It was under similar conditions that Professor Wilson wrote of Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic party:

Mr. Jefferson was an aristocrat who deliberately practiced the arts of the politician, and exhibited oftentimes the worst of insincerity which subtle natures yield to without loss of essential integrity.

And again: "Washington found Jefferson a guide who needed watching. It was under similar conditions that Professor Wilson wrote of Andrew Jackson:

The country is older now than it was when Andrew Jackson delighted in his power, and few can believe that it would again approve or applaud childish arrogance and ignorant arbitrariness like his.

It was under similar unconstrained conditions, before his natural line of thought was affected by his Presidential ambition, that Professor Wilson referred to our immigrants from the south of Europe:

As men of the lowest class and born of the meaner sort, men out of the ranks where there was neither skill nor energy, nor any initiative of quick intelligence.

They came in numbers, which increased from year to year, as if the countries of the south of Europe were disbanding themselves of the more sordid and hapless elements of their population.

The Chinese were more to be desired as workmen, if not as citizens, than most of the coarse crew that came crowding in every year at the Eastern ports.

The unlikely fellows who came in at our Eastern ports were tolerated because they carried no place but the very lowest in the scale of labor.

Suppose a man had spoken disparagingly of you for fifty years, and then had decided to try to borrow some money from you, and had thereupon spoken pleasantly of you?

Could you believe that he was really your friend, or would you shrewdly suspect that he was only trying to flatter you into doing him a favor?

Would you think that you were quite safe in intrusting important matters deeply affecting your interests to his hands?

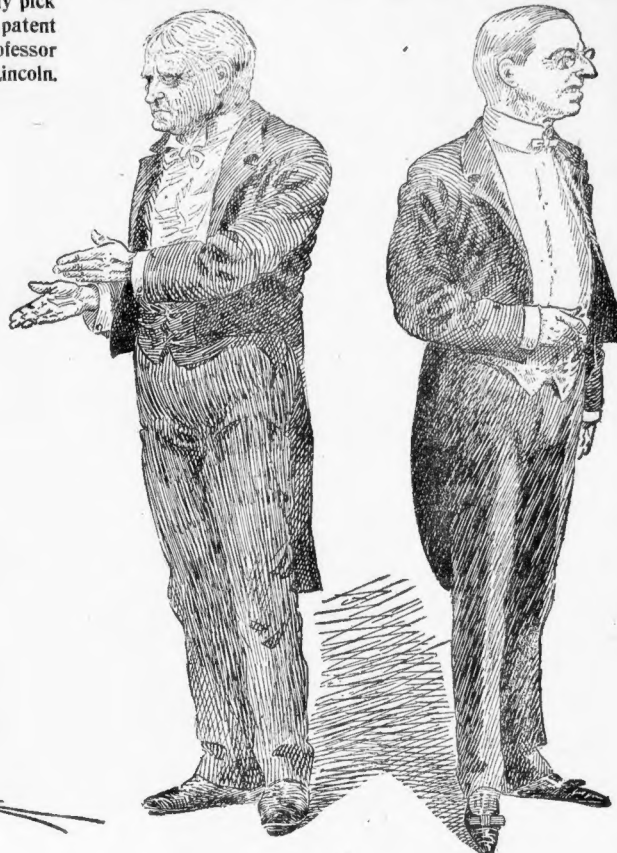

And, if I were your personal adviser, as a conscientious publisher is a trusted adviser of the public, would I be doing my duty to you if I advised you to intrust too much to this shagbait man until I felt sure that he had become your friend and was not merely pretending to be so?

I have a high conception of my journalistic duties and responsibilities, and I adhere to that conception with devotion and without deviation.

If I were convinced that Professor Wilson were a genuine Democrat, capable of being elected to the Presidency, and of conducting the great office in the interests of the people, I would unreservedly advise the people to support him.

But, being unconvinced of this, I will not advise the people to support him, let all the dogs from Spot to Cerebus howl as they will.

But Professor Wilson has told more speeches than all the other candidates for the Presidency in all the other parties combined, and still he has not yet been able definitely to state what HE really believes.

To those who ask for bread, Professor Wilson distributes the polished plumes of his oratory. They may be brilliant, they may be beautiful, but they are not bread, they are but stones.

Professor Wilson, who formerly ridiculed and reviled the initiative, referendum, the recall and direct nominations, and educated his students to oppose these popular measures, now says that he believes in the initiative in a way, and in the referendum in part, and in the recall on certain occasions, and in direct nominations under certain conditions.

He thinks that the tariff is an issue, but he has been unable clearly to formulate his tariff programme.

He concedes that the trust question is the leading one, but he has been unwilling clearly to explain how he purposes to deal with the trust question.

To my mind he is a perfect jackrabbit of politics perched upon his little hillock of expediency with ears erect and nostrils distended, keenly alert to every scent or sound and ready to run and double in any direction on the slightest intimation of danger.

If Professor Wilson's inconsistencies and contradictions, his undemocratic and un-American utterances, should not become sufficiently well known before the convention to prevent his nomination, they will certainly be well enough known during the campaign to prevent his election.

And while defeat at the polls is not what the Democrat desires, that defeat would certainly be better for the party in the long run than election of a man who is not in heart and action a Democrat.

The whole trouble with Professor Wilson is that he is not a Democrat and does not know how to be a Democrat. His Democratic pose is assumed, and, therefore, awkward and unnatural.

He is a fish out of water. In the pursuit of his ambitions he has left the Federalist element, in which he knows how to swim, and has come out upon Democratic land, upon which he does not know how to walk.

As a candidate for President he would be a pitiful disappointment.

As an actual President he would be a positive danger to his party and to the country. A Democratic President who is not a Democrat would be a failure, and the failure of an administration for which the Democratic party could be held responsible would mean the expulsion of Democracy from power for another score of years.

These are my reasons for not supporting Professor Wilson. They may or may not be sound. At least they are not selfish.

I have a fairly accurate faculty for detecting frauds, as Mayor Schmitt, and Mayor Glynn, as Senator Bailey and Senator Forsaker, as District Attorney Jarome and Governor Dix can testify.

I unhesitatingly classify Professor Wilson in the same category as the above worthies, and confidently wait for time and events to prove the accuracy of my judgment.

The above quotation gives you part of analysis of Professor Wilson by W. R. Hearst, expressed in his interview in the Washington Post. It is an analysis such as would be arrived at by any conscientious citizen determined to accept only a Democrat as a Democratic candidate and determined to oppose the selection for the Presidency of a man whose "convictions" could all be changed to order in twenty-four hours—a man like Professor Woodrow Wilson, who has absolutely reneged on service of any kind, who has absolutely not reason give for his candidacy except the fact that he would like to be elected.

Professor Wilson, the man who declared himself so poor that he had to beg Carnegie of the steel trust for a pension, a fact which is on record, Professor Wilson is now campaigning at an expense TO SOMEBODY of about a hundred dollars an hour.

Professor Wilson, who wanted steel trust money from Carnegie in order, as he himself said, that the money might keep him above temptation and honest; Professor Wilson of the "patent leather pumps and the pretty patent interchangeable ideas" will not be nominated for the Presidency in the opinion of this newspaper.

But about Professor Wilson BE nominated. THANKS TO THE SAME POWERFUL TRUST THAT IS NOW PAYING FOR HIS ELECTIONEERING TOUR, PROFESSOR WILSON will not be elected, and that is not opinion, but fact, for men whom the professor calls "men of the baser and meaner sort" will combine with sensible business men and others to keep the pretty-footed friend of Chinese labor out of the White House.
